

Helping People with Shopping

Today, some companies have started selling fresh foods in new ways. These companies use convenience stores to deliver the foods. Customers order the foods from their mobile phones and pick them up at the convenience stores, and in this way they help people to do their daily shopping more easily. It will become more common in the future.

